Capt. Hodgins started to clean up the Tenderloin last night. At the head of half dozen plain clothes men he raided and closed nine alleged disorderly houses or dancing halls and arrested thirty-seven women. The proprietors of many other places were notified to move before 9 o'clock this morning under penalty of arrest.

This is only the beginning," said the captain, after his evening's work was done We've closed a lot of 'em to-night and we're going to close a lot more to-morrow. We mean business.

A house on Thirty-second street, west of Sixth avenue, was the first one visited. The captain hadn't intended to raid this ce and had no evidence against it, but a red light in the hall showed him his duty. "Put out that red light." be said to the colored woman who came to the door.

There are enough red lights on the East

Bide. We don't want any of them here " The colored woman expostulated. The Captain said a word to Detective Brosnan and the latter drew his billy and smashed the light. The Captain then enjoined the woman to close up, and the procession moved on to Johnny Jones's Crescent Club, the Thirty-second street crescent Club, the Thirty-second street resort where two policemen were shot by the negro Lucas recently. Johnny Jones wasn't there. His bartender and half a dozen other negroes were.

"I told Jones he'd have to shut up," said the Captain. "Why hasn't he done it?"

The bartender explained that he was just paying off the help and that the place was closed to the public. The Captain wasn't satisfied, but sat down and waited until the last negro had departed and the lights were dark.

until the last negro had departed and the lights were dark.

In a house across the street seven women were arrested. In a house adjoining this one the cops found the lights burning brightly, but neither women nor men. An open scuttle on the roof showed that the inmates had taken warning from the fate of their neighbors. Nine women in places on Thirty-first street west of Sixth avenue were not so alert and were sent to the station in patrol wagons. The captain and houses where there are The captain and his detectives then went into several flat houses where there are numerous tenants and notified all of them to leave before 9 o'clock this morning. Two other places that were closed were the Knickerbocker Club, 104 West Thirtieth street, and the Cedar Social Club, 140 West Thirty-second street. It was in the latter place that Smoky Moke Brown killed William Butler and Thaddeus Washington recently.

SIX MEN FOUND MURDERED.

Syrians Were Killed in a Lodging House -Mystery Over the Crime. MINNEAPOLIS, March 28.-The bodies of four Syrians, horribly mutilated, were discovered here to-day in a second floor room and two in the basement of a ramshackle, tumbledown building. The two in the basement were father and son, who evidently had been murdered upstairs and then dragged to the basement.

The Minneapolis police believe that the murders were planned against the father and son for their money and that the others were killed in a fight over a division of the spoils. All of the bodies plainly showed the marks of a desperate fight. The house in which the crimes were committed was evidently a Syrian boarding house. Cots were the only furniture it contained. Belts usually worn by laborers were found on all the

SLUGGING THE CAR CONDUCTOR

POPULAR FORM OF VIOLENCE GOES MERRILY ON.

Police Find One Conductor on the Roof of His Car With Populace Inviting Him te Come Down and Be Killed-Passengers in Cells-Pleasant for Others.

An argument between James Bradley, the conductor of a northbound Broadway car, and a passenger who asked for a transfer ended in a fine row when the car reached Columbus Circle last night. The conductor said the passenger hadn't paid his fare at all and tried to put him off at Fifty-ninth

Charles H. Ames, a salesman, got up at this point and vanked the bell cord so hard that he broke it. Bradley made for Ames, who planted three punches on the conductor's countenance. A crowd gathered around the car, which had halted at a crossing and blocked traffic in all directions. Some one telephoned to Police Headquarters that a riot was on and the reserves from the West Forty-seventh street station came over.

Policeman Walsh arrived just ahead of the reserves and found Conductor Bradley perched on top of the car, his face bleeding, and a crowd in the street telling him that if he would only come down they would kill him. Walsh succeeded in coaxing Bradley down and then arrested Ames for

WEDDING SECRET OUT.

Dressmaker Telephoning About Gown Caused a Surprise for the Couple.

At the residence of Dr. H. DuBois Goetchius, 849 Lexington avenue, there lived the doctor, his wife, his wife's sister, Miss Mary E. Armstrong, and Russell K. Bryer, a young dentist, who is a friend of the doctor. Yesterday morning the telephone bell in the doctor's study rang and a voi ce said to him:

"Your gown is ready."

The doctor thought the call was meant or his wife and summoned her. To Mrs.

for his wife and summoned her. To Mrs. Goetchius the same message was transmitted, and the voice added:

"You'll make a beautiful bride."

The doctor and his wife put their heads together and thought it all out. Then they sent notes around to friends and engaged the services of the Rev. Henry Marsh Warren, the hotel chaplain, for the evening. When Mr. Bryer and Miss Armstrong came in for lunch the doctor and his wife informed them that they were discovered and that all arrangements were made for and that all arrangements were made for the celebration of the nuptials in the evening.

Mr. Bryer was willing. So was Miss Armstrong. They hadn't expected to have the marriage so soon, they said, but they had thought they would have the ceremony performed all by themselves. There was a merry wedding in the doctor's residence.

UNION SUIT PICTURES BAD, so Comstock and Justice Deuel Think—No Penalty for MacFadden.

Justice Deuel of the Court of Special Sessions decided yesterday that it is detrimental to public morals to exhibit the photographs of athletes clad in union suits.

Bernarr MacFadden, the physical culturist, was arrested last October by Anthony Comstock for exhibiting in his physical culture restaurant at 654 Broadway posters advertising the physical culture show then being held at Madison Square Garden. The posters contained pictures of some of the star athletes who competed in a similar exhibition the year before. The athletes were of both sexes. The case has been dragging through the courte ever since the arrest. It was settled vesthe Employing Bookbinders' Association, terday when MacFadden and the manager of his restaurant. Gomer Reiss, were found guilty and sentence was suspended. Charles J. Bamberger, Comstock's assistant, and MacFadden were the principal Bamberger told of seeing the posters in the window and of the subsequent saizure of more than eight hundred of them. MacFadden stated that he gave the physical culture exhibit "for the purpose of in-teresting the public in a better physical life, to exhibit men and women who had reached a splendid development through physical training and to elevate the public morals."

After the evidence in the case had been

After the evidence in the case had been taken Justice McKean said he thought it was very bad for the public morals to place such pictures in a public place. Justice Zeller said he disagreed with his colleague and could see nothing harmful whatever about the posters. Then Justice Deuel announced that he agreed with Justice McKean. He said it was the decision of the court that the defendant was guilty, and he dwelt at some length upon the harmfulness of such pictures. He agreed to suspend sentence.

MacFadden should be dealt with severely.
He said that ever since the latter's arrest he had continued to publish books and magazines that he (Comstock), was sure "This man MacFadden," said Comstock, "thinks he is above the law."

Comstock was interrupted by Justice You disagree with me about these things. but I think my standard of decency is as high as yours. I can see nothing harmful in these pictures."

Comstock subsided and the case ended.

To Inspect European Hospitals.

The Board of Health, which is building new contagious disease hospitals in various parts of the city and a tuberculosis sanitarium at Otisville, and which has recommended the erection of a municipal filtra-tion plant, decided yesterday to send Dr. Herman M. Biggs, chief medical officer of the board, to Europe to inspect the hospitals and filtration plants there. Dr. Biggs will leave in ten days, to be gone three months. Commissioner Darlington will then take up the question of a filtration plant with the Beard of Fetimete.

CONNECTING RAILROAD SAYS NO. Won't Build Its Line if the City Insists on Regulating Freight Bates.

President Samuel Rea of the New York Connecting Railroad, in a letter to the committee of the Board of Estimate appointed to confer with the Rapid Transit Commission upon the terms to be charged for the Connecting Railroad franchise, made it clear yesterday that his company will not agree to the proposal to allow the city to supervise the rates for the carrying of freight over the projected road.

"It would be impossible," Mr. Rea stated, to raise the capital for this construction if the entire value of the enterprise was subject to the hazard of unlimited special determination of rates by the Board of Estimate or any other local board, however igh its character and position."

In another part of his letter Mr. Rea

The Pennsylvania and New Haven Railroad companies are subject to the provisions of their own charters granted by other States than New York and to the laws of such States, and they could enter into no stipulation subordinating their corporate powers as to the business between New York and those States. Practically all the business which the Pennsylvania or New Haven road would bring to the Connecting Railroad would be inter-state business, for it would be traffic coming to New York from other States or going to other States. With respect to such interstate commerce, the Pennsylvania and New Haven railroads are subject to such con-stitutional enactments as the United States Congress may make and to the lawful jurisdiction of the Interstate Commerce Commission. with your request to prepare a clause for inthe Connecting Railroad and its allied companies as you suggest. I repeat, however, that if the other provisions of the proposed certificate should be satisfactory there would be no objection to a provision prohibiting excessive rates upon the railroad of the New Connecting Railroad Company and requiring that its rates should be reasonable. The meaning of the letter is that should the city insist upon inserting a rate regu-lation clause in the franchise the company will carry out its threat to withdraw its application for permission to build the

for $1,750,000. Comptroller Metz said yesterday that he had decided to recommend to the Board of Estimate the purchase of the Bliss property and other lands at Bay Ridge for the long talked of Owl's Head Park. A. W. Lane, the executor of the Bliss estate, has offered to sell the uplands to the city for $750,000 and the riparian rights for $1,000,000. The estate comprises twenty-five acres of shore land and twelve and a half acres of water covered land with the riparian rights. In conjunction with the establishing of the park it is Mr. Metz's idea to improve the Shore road, and, should the traffic seem to justify, the running of ferryboats between the Battery and Bay Ridge. MR. LAMB NO "ARCHETECT."

Wants It Spelled Right Before He Will O. K. a Contractor's Bill. OBANGE, N. J., March 28.-Common Councilman Kenney reported to the Town Council of West Crange last night that Charles Darlinson, the contractor who made the brownstone slab which is placed over the entrance to the new fire house on Washington street and which is designed to immortalize the names of the town officers, wanted his money. The town has been owing Darlinson $35 for two years because the architect, Hugh Lamb, refused to approve his work. Mr. Lamb's name appears on the stone as the architect of the building, but Darlinson spelled it "archetect." There was a long discussion over the There was a long discussion over the merite of the case. Some contended that "archetect" was good enough, but others pointed out that as the fire house is directly opposite a school, and therefore the rendezvous for the small boy population, which would naturally look up to the Town Councilmen for all that was fine and literary, the error would constitute a shocking; bad example in spelling. Said Councilman Heichel: "A man might go to night school and yet forget how to spell in the daytime."

It didn't develop in the course of the debate whether the architect or the stone outter made the original mistake and cutter made the original mistake and the matter was referred to the fire com-mittee to find out. Lamb says Darlinson must make the correction before he will approve the bill and the Councilmen say Lamb must approve the bill before they will pay out the money.
